

Aleph Paul Boaz Siegel Nadiv
Candidate for the high and honorable position of
Young Leadership Conference Coordinator
My Brother Alephs,

From my experience from the previous YLC, I learned BBYO's rich history and bold Principals. This past YLC has had a lasting impact on me as an Aleph and as a leader. YLC is one of the most important weekends of the programming year due to its responsibility for educating our AITs and MITs. This is a responsibility that I'm prepared and ready to accomplish. At the previous YLC, I was inspired by my peers to take action and become more involved in the organization, I'm asking you to give me the chance to give this inspiration to Michigan Region's future leaders.

I remain,

Aleph Paul Boaz Siegel Nadiv

My Three Goals for YLC

Integrating The Chapters

Synopsis: In my intent of Caucus, I went in depth with the issue of segregation in the Michigan Region. I talked about how I believe that the AZA chapters are too set apart and do not take the opportunity to create many relationships with Alephs in separate chapters. Making strong relationships is critical to having a strong organization. With me behind the wheel of YLC, I will work effectively to build relationships for BBYO's future.

Educating Our Youth

Synopsis: One of my biggest goals for this position is to successfully educate our members with our organization's conduct and history. I was educated with these important lessons at IC and YLC, and I find it to be an exemplary lesson that our youth should have at their disposal. With this goal, I'm also focusing on the importance of teaching our youth how to effectively make speeches and effectively run a meeting. Our youth are our future; their education in these areas is what they will need in the future.

Recruiting for Summer Programs

Synopsis: Although I have yet to attend one, I know how important summer programs are to our organization. I will be attending CLTC 2 this summer because of my thirst for knowledge of our bold organization. With coordinating YLC, I can apply BBYO's important lessons and show them the great knowledge and leadership they can acquire at CLTC, ILTC and other BBYO summer programs.

Education Program Ideas

Parli-Pro Gingerbread House.

Synopsis: Robert's Rules is a frustrating procedure that very often ends with confusion and anger. At the previous YLC, we used Robert's Rules to make a bedtime story outline. This was a wonderful idea, however, I noticed that some of my fellow Alephs lost interest in the program. I would like to build on last YLC's teaching tools for explaining Robert's Rules. The Alephs can make their dessert for lunch by building a gingerbread house. They're not that expensive, would make an excellent tool for learning and great to eat.

Meeting Practice

After having the chapters come together and have a meeting, I want to test out something with the members who did not get elected. I want to have them get off topic during the meeting. Sometimes meetings get off track because some members are getting off topic. I want to help train the AITs and MITs on what to do in that type of situation so that if it happens in a real meeting, they are prepared.

BBYO Jeopardy (Revamped)

Jeopardy was a great idea at the previous YLC that worked as follows; It had the AITs and MITs learn BBYO's history and then compete in a game of Jeopardy using BBYO's great history and principles. Although it is a great idea, some people lost interest of the program. I thought that maybe to improve the success of the program, we could offer a type of award so the lessons and history are efficiently taught and stays in the young member's minds. An example of a reward could be first to get food or a gift card.
